

Victoria Wilmore

Global Temperature Control
Support Center Director

Johnson & Johnson

Victoria Wilmore is currently the Johnson & Johnson Global Temperature Control Support Center Director. She has acted as the subject matter expert (SME) for temperature control supporting the launch of the Janssen emergency use authorization COVID-19 vaccine in the US and Europe.

In addition, she has played a key role in the qualification and implementation of temperature control solutions (active & passive) in North America protecting pharmaceutical, medical device, and consumer products. She brings over 16 years of Johnson & Johnson supply chain experience with a focus on Quality. She currently resides in Grapevine, TX with her husband and two children.